Instructions

→ Introduce the activity

- Today, we will take a closer look at the founding home of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity, Holt House, in Monmouth, Illinois. The mission of Holt House is, "to promote a welcoming spirit, to preserve Fraternity history and to provide an inviting setting that serves Pi Beta Phi collegiate chapters, alumnae organizations and the greater Monmouth community." The vision of Holt House states, "Holt House, the founding home of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity, is committed to being recognized as a premier historic home."
- Join me as we watch this short 10 minute DVD about how Holt House came to be what it is today. Then, we will play a short game. Be sure to listen for interesting facts about the history of the property and the use of the property today.

→ Begin the video by clicking "Play Movie" on the opening DVD menu and stop it when it reaches Part Two at the nine minute and 30 second mark.

- Divide participants into two or four groups to begin playing the Holt House Jeopardy game. Make sure to setup your flip chart paper ahead of time according to the attached document called, “Holt House Jeopardy Setup” and possibly a second piece of flip chart paper to keep score for each team. An assistant may be needed to cross off questions after they have been asked and keep score. Introduce the game by giving participants the following instructions:
 - Who is ready for a game of Holt House Jeopardy? Here’s how to play. On the flip chart paper you will see five categories of questions: People, Dates, Names, Facts and Founders. Each has questions worth 100, 200, 300, 400 and 500 points. When it is your team’s turn, someone from your group will choose a category and point value by saying something like, “People for 100”. Then you will be given a statement about something just presented in the video and someone from your team will have five seconds to respond to the statement in the form of a question. For example, if the statement was, “This is the name given to Pi Beta Phi’s Founding Home;” you would answer, “What is Holt House?” If no one from your team answers within five seconds, I will say, “Time’s up” at which point someone from another team may raise their hand to be called on to offer a guess. Whichever team guesses correctly will be awarded the point value for that question and will be allowed to pick another question. That team will continue answering questions until they answer incorrectly or run out of time. Does anybody have any questions?
- Take any questions that participants may have.
- Once Holt House Jeopardy is over, tally each team’s point totals to determine the winner.
- Choose one or more of the following activities to close the seminar.

Holt House: Pi Beta Phi’s Founding Home – Part Two

- As a group, watch Part Two of the Holt House: Pi Beta Phi’s Founding Home DVD. Part Two of the DVD offers a tour of the home, explains the significance of each room and the treasures it holds and highlights current uses of the facility. Part Two is approximately 14 minutes in length.

Discussion Questions

- The following questions are designed to enhance the DVD’s message. Consider using these discussion questions in one of the following ways:
 - If you have a Founders’ Day speaker, ask the speaker to lead this discussion.
 - If the group is sharing a meal or refreshments, have the questions at each place setting and ask each participant to ask her question to those seated at her table.
 - Write these questions on flip chart pages and hang them around the room so that participants can discuss informally during an informal reception.
- Discussion questions:
 - What do you think were some of the things the women discussed in that upstairs room the day Pi Beta Phi was founded?
 - Has anyone in the group ever visited Holt House? If so, describe that experience. If not, what do you imagine that experience might be like?
 - Put yourself in the shoes of one of the founders. What do you think it was like to be in Libbie and Ada’s room that day? If you could have known what you know about what Pi Beta Phi is today, would that have changed any of the decisions being made?
 - What do you think “Major” Holt thought about these women having secret meetings behind closed doors in his home? Do you think he had any idea what was going on?
 - Why do you think it was important to these women to have an organization like I.C. Sorosis for themselves?

Final Wrap-Up

→ After watching Part Two of the DVD or the discussion questions, bring everyone back together to close the seminar.

- Holt House is more than just a house. It is a landmark symbolizing the beginning of a movement that would sweep across the nation for centuries following. Ada Bruen once said, “It has always been a real joy to me that I had a little part in the founding of Pi Beta Phi, and I wish you all continued prosperity of success.”

→ Thank everyone for coming.
